PREPARED FOR OPULENCE TIES

The shop sells while the phone is face down.

Right now it does not. A buyer asks the price, whether the piece is in stock, how to pay, or where the order is. You are with a customer, in traffic, or asleep. They buy from whoever answers while you are still typing.

Those four questions are a second job. The business stays the size of the messages you can touch yourself. A new website that still waits on you is the same problem in a nicer frame.

You are not buying a website. You are buying the result: a guest pays without writing you, and the four answers go out before you pick up the phone.

- They will not hunt through the shop. If paying takes a message, they leave.
- WhatsApp is where the day disappears. Instagram is the door you would still have to watch.
- An empty shop, untrained staff, and an agency that leaves on launch day puts every one of those jobs back on you.

IF WE MISS IT, WE STAY

If any piece named in your package is not delivered, we finish it at no added fee. The job is not closed, and we do not leave, until that work is in your hands.

CLARITY LABS

The Phone-Down Launch

THE RESULT
A guest sees the piece and pays without writing you.

WHY IT HAPPENS
Price, stock, a pay link, and order status are answered on the channels you choose.

HOW FAST
The answer is there before you open the phone. Work starts the day payment lands.

WHAT YOU DO
You step in only when someone asks for a person.

Same result. Fewer jobs left on you.

Each step up removes the next reason this fails: the other inbox, the empty shop, the people who do not know the office, and the weeks after real customers start writing.

PAID IN FULL

6-Day Counter

Kills the "how do I order?" message and the WhatsApp queue. Instagram, the catalogue, and training stay with you.

- Guest can see a piece and pay. Ghana buyers are not sent through an export form.
- The four answers on the website and WhatsApp: price, stock, pay link, order status.
- You take the chat the moment someone asks for a person.
- We stay six days after it is live.

14-Day Desk

Kills the second door. People who never open the site still get the same four answers where they already write.

- Everything in the 6-Day Counter.
- The same answers on Instagram.
- Website, WhatsApp, and Instagram in one office. You can take any chat.
- We stay two weeks after it is live.

6-Week Phone-Down Launch

The shop opens with pieces on it, your people can run it, and we are still there while real orders start. Saying no puts the loading, the training, and those six weeks back on you.

- Shop, WhatsApp, and Instagram, answered the same way.
- First 30 products loaded, so day one is not an empty shop.
- The people who will run the office, trained.
- We stay six weeks after it is live.

Reply with Counter, Desk, or Launch. We start the day payment lands, and we stay until every piece in that package is in your hands.
